acQuire Technology Solutions acquires environmental information management software, EnviroSys acQuire Technology Solutions Pty Ltd (acQuire), a global specialist in geoscientific information management software solutions, has acquired the environmental and water quality data management software EnviroSys from SRA Information Technology Pty Ltd (SRA). The acquisition adds an environmental and monitoring solution to acQuire's existing product suite.

EnviroSys is an environmental compliance management and monitoring software product, used by mining, government, water and energy companies. It's a flexible, comprehensive and accessible product enabling customers to capture, analyse and produce compliant reports on their projects. The software solution is used mostly in Australia.

EnviroSys is highly complementary to acQuire's flagship product, GIM Suite, and strengthens acQuire's competitive edge and position as an industry leader in geoscientific information management solutions for the natural resources industry.

SRA CEO Steve Rowe said, "With EnviroSys' growing success and continually improving product, it was important for EnviroSys to find a new partner to maximise its growth potential, not only in Australia but globally. We see further opportunities for both companies and will partner on future opportunities and projects."

 "We are very excited to welcome the EnviroSys team into the acQuire family. They are an excellent fit for the acQuire brand with an innovative and modern software solution and we look forward to growing their excellent product and reputation under our ownership," acQuire CEO Alison Atkins said.

"Our success as a global provider of geoscientific information management solutions, plus being backed by Vela Software, means we can leverage shared services, expertise, and partnerships to extend the EnviroSys product into new areas. We see fresh opportunities to deliver the EnviroSys technology to more companies across the globe and create a connected product suite to benefit our existing and future customers."
