

Adelaide photographer featured behind the lens with Nikon

Kick It To MeFriday, July 30th, 2021

Winning an Instagram competition proved to be the catalyst for transforming Adelaide-based photographer Sue McKay from amateur to professional. In just four years Sue has gone from shooting local footy to presenting for Nikon School Australia. This Tuesday Sue tells her story in Nikon's Behind The Lens series, an online workshop providing insight to the work of some of Australia's expert photographers.

"Back in 2017 I won a competition to shoot the Socceroos friendly v Saudi Arabia from the sidelines", said Sue. "Nikon Ambassador and ten times Olympics photographer Delly Carr was on hand to provide tips and I got to try some of Nikon's professional DSLR camera bodies and lenses. Not only was that a dream come true, but the images I captured that night opened doors for other exciting ventures including my ultimate, shooting for the AFL."

As a female working in a predominantly male-dominated industry, Sue says she never felt out of place as she strived to further her career. "If anything, I found everyone I encountered to be welcoming, encouraging, and generous in sharing their knowledge. This no doubt helped me take the steps to progress and I'll be touching on that during my presentation with Nikon".

Nikon Australia is a sponsor of Sue's South Australian Living Artists (SALA) Festival exhibition Here Comes the Sun. The joint exhibit with friend and painter Nella De Pizzol conveys the artists' interpretation of The Beatles song. Eleven works will be on display at Martini On The Parade until 29 August.

Sue, a professional sports, birth and lifestyle photographer has incorporated her vision and inspiration behind the exhibition into a video accompaniment. The full video and all artwork is available to view online at Sue's website www.suemckay.com/sala2021.

Sue's exhibition works will be featured in Nikon's Behind The Lens series on 3 August. Registrations via the link.
